Breezelets

The Austrians are sent west. It is up to the Allies now to send them back east.

Germany to Austria: "We admit being licked if you don't help us, but we are still strong enough to lick you—is you refuse to help."

"Germany throws many monuments into the melting pot."

Germany herself will be in the melting pot before long.

J. H. Burnham, M.P., for West Peterborough, Ont., has for many sessions conducted a campaign in the house of commons against granting titles to Canadians.

"What shall we do with these empty titles?" tragically asked Burnham?

Why, Burnham, of course.

"Canada awaits issue of King's birthday honors," says a news heading.

Guess J. H. Burnham, M.P., needn't be sneaking around for a handle to his name, that's a cinch.

Probably Hindenburg was waiting for his Sinn Fein allies to be ready—if so, he'll wait some more, and then some.

How many German victories does it take to make Ally defeat?

The blocking of Ostend seems still to be considered a base trick even by the British.

Always anxious to make full use of everything of course the Germans will see conversation of energy in the fact that the trains that take the troops to the front do not have to return empty. They are overwhelmingly filled with the wounded.

The government will spread a drag net to round up evaders under the Military Service Act.

To get some the government will need a post hole digger as well as a net.

Red, white and blue must be the Russian national colors now. They have adopted the Red flag after making such liberal use of the white one, and altogether they must feel pretty blue.

Get the Home in your mind down on paper

Every real Home has its beginning in the mind of the father, mother and children or in the mind of some young husband or wife—or husband and wife to-be.

It is the ideals of home-life as they develop from day to day that creates in the mind a desire and a demand for the correct kind of place to live those ideals.

It used to be more or less difficult to get personality built into a home without going to considerable expense for an architect's service. But now it's possible for anyone to build a made-to-order home at very moderate cost.

JUST-GIVE US YOUR IDEAS

and we will work them out for you quickly in correct plan, so you can see in advance just what the home will look like

We make no charge for this service and we will be glad to have you make use of it now for planning a new home or remodeling an old one

If you have plans already selected, let us help you select the best materials for the job so that the home may be constructed right at the lowest cost

Chinook Breezes

Chinook's sports day, June 20

Rev. Father Bowlen was a Chinook visitor for a few days this week.

Mrs. R. S. Woodruff and family is visiting her mother, at Sperling, Manitoba, for a month

The Rev. and Mrs. Elliott are attending the annual conference of the Methodist church, which is meeting at Edmonton.

Farmers generally are beginning to feel a bit anxious for much more moisture and warmer weather, for their crops.

In another column will be found particulars as where to register under the Military Service Act, for those of 19 years of age.

Posters are out for Chilmark's annual picnic and sports day, on Friday, June 21st. Over $500.00 is offered in prizes. It promises to be some day, sure.

In the baseball matches at Youngstown to-day, Chinook lost to the home team by a score of 4-5, but the home team lost to Chilmark by a score of 7-2, the latter team taking home the $100.00 prize money.

The village was very quiet on Victoria Day, most of the citizens going to the sports at Youngstown. The weather, however, turned out cold and damp, and most of the sports had to be postponed—it was regular Youngstown 24th of May sports day weather.

GERMANY HAD THE OPPORTUNITY FOR PRESERVING WORLD PEACE

MORE REVELATIONS CONCERNING ENEMY'S GUILT

Memorandum of Prince Lichnowsky Shows That Germany Could Have Reached Agreement Acceptable to Great Britain, But Balked Efforts of Ambassador to London

Further sections of the memorandum which Prince Lichnowsky, German ambassador at London when the war began, wrote for the purpose of justifying his position to several friends, are published by The Politician, organ of the Extreme Left of the Socialists. In the preceding sections Prince Lichnowsky described his efforts to secure a better understanding between Germany and Britain after his appointment as ambassador to London in 1912, and how they were thwarted because of the persistence of the German foreign office in backing up the Austrian view on Eastern questions, the following out of which he felt would lead to a collision with Russia and a world war.

The new portions of the memorandum deal principally with the negotiations over the Anglo-German colonial treaty. Prince Lichnowsky remarks at the outset that the good relations he had established in London had effected a noticeable improvement in Germany's relations with Britain. Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign minister, developed himself honestly to this rapprochement, says the prince, and his intentions to this end were especially noticeable as regards the colonial treaty and the Baghdad railway.

In 1908, continues Prince Lichnowsky, Count von Hatfield-Wiggenburg, the German minister to Great Britain, signed a secret agreement with the British government dividing the Portuguese colonies in Africa into economic spheres of interest between Germany and Great Britain, insuring "inviolability and independence of the Portuguese kingdom, and declaring the intention to support Portugal financially and economically." "The prince, therefore, he points out, did not clash with the old Anglo-Portuguese treaty dating from the sixteenth century. Nevertheless at the instigation of the Marquis de Soveral, Portuguese minister to Great Britain, a new Anglo-Portuguese treaty, signed in 1899, reinforcing the old treaty, the prince sets forth.

The Anglo-German negotiations, which began before Prince Lichnowsky's arrival, were intended to secure the revision and improvement of the treaty of 1899, and, thanks to the accommodating attitude of the British government, Prince Lichnowsky says he was able to give the new treaty a form conforming to German wishes and desires.

"Sir Edward Grey," continues Prince Lichnowsky, "wished to show us good-will, and also in the main to further our colonial development, while Great Britain also wished to lead the German development of power from the North Sea to Western Europe to the Atlantic and Africa. 'We do not grudge Germany her colonial development,' a member of the cabinet said to me.

Prince Lichnowsky goes on to say that the treaty was "practically in readiness in 1913, but that 'new difficulties arose to prevent its signing, and only a year later, shortly before the outbreak of the war, could I receive authority to conclude the treaty. It was, however,' he adds, 'never signed.'

"Sir Edward Grey would only sign it on condition that the treaty be published, together with the 1899 and 1899 treaties. England has no secret treaties, and it was contrary to the existing principles to keep the treaty secret. Sir Edward could therefore conclude no treaty without publishing it."

COPENHAGEN CHEWING TOBACCO

Simply Place It In The Mouth Between Lower Lip and Gum.

This is the way to get all the flavor and satisfaction out of a pinch of Copenhagen Chewing Tobacco.

You see, "Copenhagen" is made of the best, old, high-flavored tobacco. The snuff process which the least tobacco is converted into tiny grains, and scientifically prepared—retains all the good of the tobacco.

Those who try "Copenhagen" for the first time, should remember to use only a small quantity, and to place the pinch in the mouth between the lower lip and the gum, without any attempt at chewing.

"It's the most economical chew."

Russian Aviators Are Poor Fighters

From "El Tair," by Lieutenant Bert Hall, an American in the French Service.

From one end of the eastern front to the other was chaos, everything and everybody. The French officer who had been sent over were doing what they could to bring about order, and in spite of this chaos, they came up in shape and organized to some extent. It made me want to laugh and weep at the same time. My work took me from a point about 100 miles south of Riga at the north to the very end of the Rumanian line on the Black sea at the south. I had a chance to see what was going on everywhere, and I mixed with the officers and men of both armies, the Russian and Rumanian. I certainly was impressed with their ideas of war after two years on the western front. No system, no anything. They have eighty-eight national holidays in Russia and no soldier will fight on a holiday. The kind of fighting they do on the other days is a joke.

In the Russian aviation corps things could hardly be better. I found that the men would fly only when they felt like it. They almost never passed over the lines and were never missed by the Russians. The average Russian aviator aims to fly six hours per month. His pay is two hundred rubles and after his six hours he takes a long rest. When I started in to really do some flying they thought I was a patriot and a fool. They didn't make any bones about telling me so. They let the German machines do what they pleased; they flew all around our lines and were never missed by the Russians.

Socially the Russian aviator is certainly a good fellow. He will play a good game of poker and put away a lot of drinks. I think they are the Germans beat in these privileges. But as fighters they are not. No patriotism, no enthusiasm, and not too much courage. About the only thing they do is to drink champagne, play poker and "66," a German game. The men always say "tomorrow." They are never in a hurry and they don't worry. The Russian has no idea of what war means in the air. They are well equipped, having all the latest types of fighting machines, but the Russians are not air fighters. They were very frank, almost childish, in expressing their feelings to me.

"Oh, we would be just as well off under German rule," they said. "I have often heard things like that. Russia means nothing to the average Russian, although they are very few, very patriotic among them."

From the north I went on down to the Caucasus front, and there I met the Grand Duke, a czar, a remarkably able soldier and a patriot. He is fighting for Russia and for the Russian people. He has no real influence with the soldiers. He is worshipped by his men.

One instance, a thing which happened to me, will show you. A description what the fighting was like here. It happened when I met the Grand Duke. He was in our lines at about 1,500 feet altitude and I went after him. I suppose he thought I was a German, as he did not pay any attention to me. I proceeded to shoot him in the back. He was very much surprised to find that my comrades did not approve of what I had done. They said:

"We have been here a long time and the Germans have never bothered us. Now they get mad and come and drop bombs on us and may kill some of us."

I thought that this was a little too good, so I moved on to another front. I found that they were all about the same. Soon after I was proposed for the Cross of St. George, the decoration for officers who are very rare in Russia. I received it by the czar's order only four days before he was shot. It was the last one given out by him.

He was the St. Vladimir, which is the Russian Legion d'Honneur.

Hindenburg's Fate in Balance

Is in No Position to Survive a Reverse on Any Front

Hindenburg is in no position to survive a reverse on any front. This is the marked view of the Paris Debates as well as of the radical French press. The popular and democratic groups in the reichstag have reached the conclusion that no piece of any kind is possible while the militarists dictate a policy to the chancellor.

This is the note which comment is the nation effect from the speech of Bismarck. Soldiers, he said, do the fighting, while the statesmen do the administering and the negotiators. It is the duty of the statesmen to be as eager for peace as the German soldiers for war. When the Socialists began to censor and then suppress after a series of these utterances, there was another uproar in the reichstag, which has now become as the Berlin Vorwarts says, more explosive than most German shells.

Holding up a butcher boy, several London women made certain of a Sunday "ross" recently. They followed a butcher lad from a shop surrounded him in a quiet road, appraised among themselves the fair way in the trap and then, according to the tick pinned on the meat. The lad returned with an empty tray, a startling sign of the "hush" and hard case as evidence of the truthfulness of his story.

Engineering Wonder

Suspension Bridge Built of Wire in British Columbia Has Collapsed

When the suspension bridge that crossed the Bulkley Canyon in Northwestern British Columbia recently collapsed the world lost one of its engineering wonders. With only the aid of the wilderness, with no knowledge of the laws of stress, vibration, tensile strength and carrying load, of various materials, the red men succeeded after two failures in throwing across the canyon at a height of one hundred feet a suspension bridge one hundred and forty-six feet long and ten feet wide.

A little while before the first successful Atlantic cable was laid an American telegraph company conceived the brilliant scheme of connecting North America by wire with Europe. The plan was to run a line through the wilderness at the extreme end of the North America, then over the very narrow strip of water of Bering Strait to land in Siberia. Thence the wire would connect with all the capitals of Europe. The company started work and at immense expense carried out great deal of material into the Canadian wilderness. While the work was still proceeding, however, the cable was successfully placed across the bottom of the ocean. That put an end to work on the overland project, and great piles of wire were abandoned in the wilderness because of the prohibitive cost of taking it.

This wire was the only white man's material that the Indians of the Bulkley Canyon had seen. The chief reliance was the timber from the surrounding forests. No nail was to be found in its entire length. The joints were made by dovetailing and by burning holes through the logs and fastening them together with strong hand-made wooden spikes.

When the Klondike rush occurred the bridge helped many gold seekers over the difficult canyon, for it lay on the route that a great many men took to the Klondike. Its neglect is probably explained by the fact that the bridge was no longer needed for the purpose of carrying gold. Its collapse was owing to neglect, for although several requests had been made for a grant to preserve it, no action was taken. The neglect is probably explained by the fact that the bridge was no longer needed for the purpose of carrying gold. Its collapse was owing to neglect, for although several requests had been made for a grant to preserve it, no action was taken.

More Freedom the Cure

Violence and Outrages Due to Ignorance of the People

If it were possible that a people could be made to understand the arbitrary system could subvert that system without acts of cruelty and fall, half the objections to despotic rule would be removed. To explore the outrages which accompany revolutions. But the more violent the outrages, the more assuredly that a revolution was necessary. The violence of these outrages will always be proportionate to the ignorance and the oppression of the people and will be proportioned to the oppression and degradation under which they have been compelled to live. It is the character of such revolutions that we always see the worst of them first. The first step is to remove the time free, they know how to use their freedom. The final and permanent fruits of liberty are wisdom, moderation, peace, and the avoidance of crimes, conflicting errors, skepticism and the most mysterious. It is just at this crisis that its enemies love to exhibit it. There is only one way to remove the cause of the required freedom products; and that cure is freedom. The reader who has been registered and may be tempted to claim: "What twaddle!" But what he has been reading was written by Macaulay in 1825. We admit, however, that it seems to have its application to events in Russia in 1918.—From the New York Evening Post.

Must Have Meat Coupons

Great surprise was experienced by visitors to London when they were asked by waitresses in restaurants for their meat coupons. It was only when they realized that they had come to a city on rations. One man from the north of England, plunging straight from the train into a restaurant at King's Cross and ordering some steak, protested that he knew nothing about any rationing scheme. When he was told that he could not be served unless he produced his meat coupon, he was very much surprised. He had not had a portion of meat he picked up his coat and hat and left. All who had forgotten to bring their registration cards had to go meatless.

RUSSIA HAS LONG BEEN UNDER THE DOMINATION OF GERMANY

WORK OF UNDERMINING NATIONAL STRUCTURE

Collapse of Nation was the Logical Result of a Campaign that Has Been Going On for Generations, According to Writers Who Have Intimate Knowledge of Conditions

It is a mistaken idea that the collapse of Russian resistance to Germany was a matter of a few months. For fifty years or more the Germans have been undermining the national structure of Russia, and only a pirouette could have prevented what happened. It was the logical result of a campaign that has been going on for generations, and as we look back over the events of recent years it seems that the alliance between Russia and France was an artificial alliance, and that the natural ally of the Russian people was that of subservience to Germany. Russia knows the terms of the pact. The French knows her. The French were strangers in the alliance, however honestly Russian statesmen strove to fulfill the terms of the pact. There is a common Russian saying, "The money comes from France, but the brains come from Germany."

In Russia we are watching the last act of the drama; we see military penetration following the peaceful penetration that has been going on before the birth of the German empire. Attention is called to this fact by the New York Times. The New Sun, who seems to know as much about foreign affairs as his name implies. He quotes from C. L. Schmitt, Wilson, general secretary of the national seamen's union, who, speaking at a meeting of sailors at Cardiff, Wales, asked those in the audience to stand up. One hundred and seventeen men of the 300 present stood up. He then remarked: "You men who are standing here have some experience with German kultur. Are you prepared to follow the advice of some of our labor leaders and shake hands with the pirates? All those who are willing to shake hands with the Germans will remain standing."

Not one of the 117 men remained on his feet.

many with this end in view. Germany had also the motive of particular hatred for the Jews because they promised eventually to open the eyes of the Russians to the fact that they were being exploited by Germany. German agents were also active in promoting revolutionary uprisings and in any other enterprise which would weaken the strength of the nation, lower it in the estimate of the outside world and make its final downfall more certain. The attitude of British sailors with regard to Germany's submarine campaign was shown by J. ## Tropical Forests

Forested Regions of Amazon River Is the Largest in the World

There are at least two very large forest regions in the tropics. These are the Amazon region of South America and the Indo-Malay region of southeastern Asia and adjacent islands. The forested regions of the Amazon river-basin comprising an area of 1,600,000 square miles is the largest in the world. The forested area of Borneo, Sumatra, the Philippine Islands, the Malay Peninsula and Burma is roughly estimated to be not less than 500,000 square miles, or nearly as large as that of the United States. Thus the forested area of these two tropical regions alone comprises more than 2,000,000 square miles. Contrary to the usual opinion, it is claimed that tropical forests are not all composed of hardwoods, but only for special purposes, but that they have a much larger percentage of soft and medium hard woods which it is quite practicable to develop economically.

SPRING WEATHER

HARD ON BABY

The Canadian spring weather—one day mild and bright, the next raw and blustery—is extremely hard on the baby. Conditions are such that the mother cannot take the little one out for the fresh air so much to be desired. He is confined to the house which is often over-heated and badly ventilated. He catches cold, his little stomach and bowels become disordered and the mother soon finds it difficult to look after. To prevent this an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets should be given. They regulate the stomach and bowels, thus preventing or curing colds, simple fevers, colic or any other of the many minor ailments of childhood. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Refugees in Silks and Sables

Pathetically incongruous figures in the Italian Retreat Amid all the chaos of the Italian retreat one kept on meeting utterly incongruous figures, for with all the world's food worn shabby and dirty to be clean and well dressed is to be grotesque. Amid this multitude of haggard, unwashed, unshaven, dead beat males, I noticed two Italian ladies delicately dressed, over the top of the railway track. They had naturally brought with them in their flight the most valuable of their possessions, which were kind to be more conveniently carried on their persons. Against this gray background of mud and rubbish and a disheveled army their two figures glittered with a brilliance that would have been conspicuous in the Rue de la Paix. Heavy sable furs and muffs almost bowed their shoulders. Each carried two or three rings. They flashed in the light. Round their necks were gold chains hung with pendants. And yet, instead of the air of self-satisfied ostentation that might have gone with a display so lavish, they were only two pale, iteally little, frightened, perplexed faces, and an uncertain gait that did not promise much further progress along that ankle-crushing railway line.—G. Ward Price, in the Century Magazine.

Boys' and Girls' Clubs

The Best Means of Teaching Agriculture in a Practical Manner

In Manitoba the boys' and girls' clubs constitute today the largest agricultural organization of the province. In 1917 there was a total membership of more than 15,000, and there is every prospect of the 20,000 mark being reached during 1918. There are now 145 central clubs, each having an average of about eight branches, composed of the most part of rural schools. The local marketing centre is usually the club centre and the place at which the annual fair is held.

Boys' and girls' clubs afford one of the best means of teaching agriculture in a practical manner, as well as making the life of children on farms more interesting. In Manitoba the clubs are all on contract basis so that the spirit of competition is appealed to. The rules of the contest really constitute the instruction in the subject, and while boys and girls get their knowledge, and experience incidentally, it nevertheless is effectively learned.

The contests include pig raising, calf raising, chicken raising, gardening, seed growing, cooking, canning, sewing, wood-working, weed eradication and essay writing. The principal assistance given by the extension service of the department of agriculture is by way of prepared literature, the organizing of clubs, sending out supplies, giving instruction in the work of the various contests, judging the gardens and seed plots and awarding prizes. The contests are run right on the ground as the best methods to follow in improving the work. Judges are supplied for all parts, while further instruction is given along agricultural lines.

Ever since the war broke out the boys and girls have been concentrating on the production end of their work, and they really had two years' start on their elders in the matter of increased food production and conservation.

WOMEN! IT IS MAGIC! LIFT OUT ANY CORN

Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without pain or soreness.

A Cincinnati mail discovered this little compound and named it free zone. Any druggist will send a tiny bottle of free zone, like here shown, for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. In a little while the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful! It dries instantly. It chews itself away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the surrounding skin. Hard, soft or corns between the toes, as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. If your druggist hasn't freezone, tell him to order a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.

Loans to Stock Raisers

Proves a Great Help to Farmers Towards Getting Into Stock Raising Quickly

A great boon to those farmers who, from lack of capital, are unable to get into stock raising as quickly as they would like are the acts of parliament passed by the various legislatures making provision for farmers to obtain live stock on credit or part credit at a low rate of interest. Last year farmers of Alberta were loaned through the government $300,000 for acquiring cows, while this year double the sum will be available for this purpose. The interest charged is six per cent. A million dollars worth of stock placed in the hands of farmers who are able to look after them, but otherwise would be unable to secure them, will be some help towards greater food production.

The irrigated districts of Southern Alberta being especially suited for the raising of cattle, by reason of the large crops of fodder that can be grown there, much encouragement has been given this industry. Under certain conditions the Canadian Pacific railway also assists buyers of its lands in these districts by advancing live stock to the value of $1,000 on a cash payment of twenty per cent, credit being given for the balance.

Ancient Bolsheviki

Athenians Declared It Monstrous to Be Prevented From Doing What They Chose

On a memorable occasion the assembled Athenians declared it monstrous that they should be prevented from doing whatever they chose. No force that existed could restrain them; and they resolved that they would be bound by no laws that were not of their own making. In this way the emancipated people of Athens became tyrants; and their government, the pioneer of European freedom, stands condemned with terrible unanimity by all the wisest of the ancients. They ruined their city by attempting to conduct war by debate in the market place. Like the French republic, they put their successful commanders to death. They treated their dependencies with such injustice that they lost their maritime empire. They plundered the rich until the rich conspired with the public enemy, and they crowned their guilt by the martyrdom of Socrates.—From Lord Acton's Essays.

Protecting the Birds

Birds Are the Greatest Help to the Agriculturist

Mr. Macdarmid's bill in the Ontario legislature for the Protection of Insectivorous Birds is an interesting one to the bird-lover as it is of importance to the agriculturist. The people, outside those who have made a special study of the matter, appreciate the great role of the little feathered creatures play in the intricate and complex economy of nature, and indeed, in the actual conservation of the life of man upon this planet. It is asserted that an insectivorous bird of any species will eat at least 100 insects a day, so varieties consuming as many as 400.

Mr. Chester A. Reed, of Worcester, Mass., in his very interesting little "Guide to Land Birds East of the Rockies," estimates that the state of Massachusetts has a bird population of about 25,000,000, which require 2,500,000,000 insects—about 21,000 bushels of them—daily for its sustenance. These figures give some idea of the great assistance farmer derives from these busy little grub-grabbers, and how necessary it is to attend to their preservation.

Laws can be made to protect the birds from the ravages of man, but there are many other agencies ever at work accompanying their destruction, such as cats and other animals, the elements, accidents, birds of prey and snakes. One fruitful source of wanton destruction is found in the depredations of thoughtless school-children, both in the killing of birds themselves and in the robbing of their nests. The best way to overcome this is by educational means. A sympathetic study of bird life would have a humanizing influence upon minds of the pupils, and weaken their natural though vicious, instinct of destruction.

Triplex Glass in Aviation The extensive use of triplex glass in aviation is responsible for a low casualty list. Time and again triplex goggles have saved the eyes of aviators and triplex windows or shields have prevented the fliers from sustaining injuries. Recently an airplane fitted with a triplex window struck a tree at thirty feet from the ground, at a speed of ninety miles an hour. It is reported that not a particle of glass was separated from the window by the impact, and that the value of this protection to the crew can well be imagined.

Keeping the Issue Clear

Little Fear of the Democratic Masses Becoming War-weary

A condition of affairs has come about in which the truly democratic elements of the western nations have the most at stake in the outcome of the war. A victory over German imperialism is more than ever essential if a deadly blow is not to be struck at democratic ideals and democratic principles reduced to practice. Even the Berlin Vorwaerts, the German Social organ, seems to have recognized that, for it predicts as a result of German territorial and economic conquests at the expense of revolutionary Russia "new threats and desire for revenge, increased armaments and intensified reaction in our country." If autocratic and militaristic Germany literally whips the world, then the world will be regarded as getting what it deserves and will soon be broken to the discipline of the Prussian drillmaster.

In such a struggle as is now forecast, there need be little fear of the democratic masses becoming weary before the classes which have been too exclusively, perhaps, in the past, the possessors of worldly comfort and privilege. For democracies will fight the struggle fiercely for ideal and aspirations rather than for materialistic or imperialistic ends. The grim logic of Hinkins' still victorious hammer strokes for militarism is such an uprising of democracy in its own defense as the world has never seen, yet the issue must be kept crystal clear.—From the Springfield Republican.

Not Spain of Old Glories

Presents the Spectacle of Sad Contrast With a Departed Splendor

The Spain of today is not the Spain of yore, tradition or four imagination. It is remote from being the colorful and romantic domain which was once the mainspring of great adventure and the inspiration of poet and painter. The glories of Velasquez and Cervantes have not been revived in our day.

She presents the spectacle of sad contrast with a departed splendor. Once a treasure house of art and wealth, the haven of mighty armadas, the nerve centre of a far reaching power on land and sea, she finds herself rent with disorder and a tool for Germanic conspiracy.

She has no twentieth century Cortes to recreate her one-time world vision; she lacks a contemporary Castilian to win the multitude with the magic of his eloquence or to guide her ship of state with steady hand through the perilous waters of uncertainty. There is not even an up-to-date Don Quixote to tilt at the windmills of discontent fanned by Teutonic hot air!

Life with her is still one plot after another. To a degree greater than existed in the Russia that was, she is like a national bomb factory. Spain always has a pretender in her midst. Worst of all, the ruling classes—that is, the classes that rule today—are hand in glove with a vast, close knit, and effective German propaganda, that, aiming at the root of Hispanic economic independence, is subtly reaching out to influence the whole world that thinks, works, buys and sells in Spanish.—Isaac F. Marcossion, in the Saturday Evening Post.

Continuous and monotonous Work - most trying on the Nerves

DOING the same thing, in the same way, day after day and week after week, means destruction to the nerve cells and collapse of the nervous system of the human body.

Whether in the munition factory or in the home, in the store or in the office, it is monotony that kills.
